A Place of Honor

*We've walked this road for many years,
Through joy, through toil, through love and tears.
We built the bridges, paved the way,
For those who walk this path today.
Yet now, as age draws near its prime,
We're left behind by fleeting time.
The world moves fast, but don't forget,
We laid the stones on which you step.
Not as burdens, not alone,
We seek respect for seeds we've sown.
A right to care, a right to voice,
A place of honor, not just choice.
A world where hands both young and old,
Together weave a future bold.
Where wisdom speaks, where kindness stays,
Where dignity lights up our days.
So build a world both kind and wise,
Where elder voices never die.
Not just in memory—let it be true,
A home for all, for me, for you.*
